

Australian Association of Bush Regenerators

We are a volunteer run organisation, formed in 1986. Our projects are funded by subscriptions and donations.

Join AABR !
a great way to Support your industry

and learn more about the bush

Our aims

- encourage the restoration and management of our natural environment by qualified, skilled people,
- promote the study and practice of bush regeneration,
- provide bush regenerators with recognition for their skills and experience,
- develop the profession by improving working conditions and industry practices.

Our activities

- regular newsletters,
- talks, seminars and field trips,
- a web site with information about bush regeneration,
- three email list servers - Bush Regeneration, Bushcare and the Volunteer Coordinators' Network for the exchange of information,
- advice on bush regeneration practice,
- the "Bushjobs" employment service,
- developing competency standards for bush regenerators,
- projects to improve working conditions and industry practices.

Who can join ?

- anyone with an interest in bushland management and conservation issues can be a subscriber -
- membership is awarded to those with experience and training.

Our members and subscribers often work as bush regeneration contractors or for local councils, or as volunteers in public reserves or private land.

Contact Us
www.aabr.org.au

Where is AABR ?

AABR has members all over Australia, including regional committees in North-eastern NSW and South-eastern Queensland and a sister organisation in Western Australia: AABR WA.

